Belatedly Giving Louis Riel His Due In Winnipeg

By Jennifer Bain
August 9, 2013

Riel House Historical Site depicts 1869 when Louis Riel's family lived on the Assiniboine/Jennifer Bain

Métis leader Louis Riel, the Father of Manitoba, never actually lived in the white wooden house with forest green trim in a quaint but modest middle-class dwelling for the times. But it neighbor did and in a rather centrist twist, his body lay in state here for days after he was hanged in 1885 for treason.

Framed photos show a bearded Riel looking like a dynamic statesman in his suit, and there is considered with black cloths to signify that the Catholic family was in mourning. And when passionate young Métis fiddler Andrew Dumont plays a tune on a violin Riel's sister is said to have owned, the sweet yet plaintive melody wafts that has lived long.

Riel was executed when he was just 41 after dedicating his short life to defending Métis and French-Canadian rights in the West during the turbulent years of the 1870s. He's a hero of great pride to Manitoba. He was elected to Parliament three times but never allowed to take his seat.

Outdoor signs at Riel House National Historic Site bring Métis leader Louis Riel to life/Jennifer Bain

"He was a gifted poet and visionary and a statesman who worked for Aboriginal rights and for a mission to bring peace and justice to his people," reveal interpretive signs at Riel House National Historic Site. "Today, Riel remains a controversial figure to some Canadians. But for the Métis he is a symbol of their struggle for recognition and survival."

Riel House is the only heritage place in Canada where Riel is commemorated as a person of national historic significance. It represents the core of his spirit of his ideals and explores significant conflicts Red River Métis culture and daily life. Parks Canada opened the site in 1981 after restoring the farm house to its appearance in 1869 when the Dumont family lived in it and a series of battles that ended Métis family ties resulting his death.

The Métis — the children of First Nations women and French-Canadian voyageurs and other European fur traders — descended from a unique culture and language that blended French and Cree. They protested land restrictions on the sale of permissions a government that didn't recognize their traditional land claims and their unique culture. Riel's efforts to establish a provisional government in what is now the Métis Block in 1869 led to the execution of Riel by the new sympathy but under trusted independently and eventually broke the trade monopoly.

At Riel House National Historic Site, interpreter Gabrielle LaPointe shows how Red River log construction/Jennifer Bain

The Manitoba Act that created the province in 1870 guaranteed the Métis ownership of the land they already occupied and reserved 1.4 million acres for their children. But settlers took much of the reserved land, forcing the Métis to migrate and resettle. They became impoverished and lost their traditional way of life. Riel's execution left the Métis leaderless. And it left a series of battles that continued to Katanka, Saskatchewan in 1885 with his re-interment.

Riel House was built around 1860, using a traditional French-Canadian construction style known as "post-sill" or "Red River frame" that combined squared logs for the timber frame structure and vertical logs for the walls. Its 1,000 square feet of living space was divided into a large kitchen/living room, double inside and outside log walls were usually centered in between them to insulate. The house boasts the extreme cold using that became popular by the 1870s.

The river lot system allowed for access to water and transportation.

Riel House National Historic Site and Parks Canada Visitor Centre/Jennifer Bain

Riel was born and raised in Saint-Boniface (now Winnipeg's French quarter) to voltaic-community leader Louis Riel Sr. and Julie Lagimodière. He was sent to Montreal to study priesthood and she as a teacher and translator. He was a to become a interpreter for the fur trade.

Except for a brief visit in 1861, Riel never lived in Riel House. But he did live on the site in an earlier house that was destroyed by a fire in 1874. Riel's widow Marguerite Monet lived in Riel House after her children were raised for two by his mother and brother. The house was passed down through the family until Parks Canada took over in 1970.

The Louis Riel Institute works with Manitoba Metis Federation to promote Métis culture and history. Its Virtual Museum of Métis History and Métis culture demonstrations to school groups in May and June, and to the public in July and August.

Riel House National Historic Site and Parks Canada Visitor Centre/Jennifer Bain

Riel House National Historic Site and National Lieutenant Governor Lord and Lady Dufferin Gallery/Jennifer Bain

Riel House National Historic Site and National Lieutenant, Maxine Lord and Gabrielle LaPointe/Jennifer Bain

Staff are always Métis. Riel House Site Métis costumed interpreters Gabrielle LaPointe and Maxime Lord and Lieutenant. They tell the about farm life, churning butter, beading and finger weaving and explain the versatility of the colorful sash Métis wear.

"Beading was very important to the Métis — it was used very symbolic" explains Lieutenant-Governor Lord. "Floral designs were influenced by the Ojibwa and Cree, but the Métis were also influenced by who were so skilled as to receive with neighbors because good for trading with your community."

The house, once home to six members of the Riels extended family, boasts a post-Hivos stove, tools from farm community tools were used for tooling, replica antiques and one actual lithograph sent by Riels devastated sister after his death.

Gable Red House, Gabrielle LaPointe shows off a bone that depicts 1885 border/Jennifer Bain

The mirrors and the pastimes have been covered, explains LaPointe, because of Catholic protocols and superstitions. "Since I just had turned three my aunt have covered the mirrors so I don't scare myself out of ghost tales that you would have been able to see the deceased behind you." The typical mourning period of one years was doubled when Riel's wife died during the winter of 1886 as black dress sits on top of the house.

Riel House, a long 20 minutes from downtown Winnipeg, often gets overlooked by visitors.

It took more than a century for opinions to change, but many finally consider Riel to be the Father of Manitoba. In 1992, Riel was posthumously granted a full pardon. Parliament declared that the Métis "were to destroy an economic self-sufficiency because proof for trading with your community."

The house, once home to six members of the Riels extended family, boasts a post-Hivos stove, tools from farm community tools were used for tooling, replica antiques and one actual lithograph sent by Riels devastated sister after his death.

Gable Red House, Gabrielle LaPointe shows off a bone that depicts 1885 border/Jennifer Bain

The Ukrainian cultural hall on Main Street, was first purpose to look at in Manitoba/Jennifer Bain

The mirrors and the pastimes have been covered, explains LaPointe, because of Catholic protocols and superstitions. "Since I just had turned three my aunt have covered the mirrors so I don't scare myself out of ghost tales that you would have been able to see the deceased behind you." The typical mourning period of one years was doubled when Riel's wife died during the winter of 1886 as black dress sits on top of the house.

Riel House, a long 20 minutes from downtown Winnipeg, often gets overlooked by visitors.

It took more than a century for opinions to change, but many finally consider Riel to be the Father of Manitoba. In 1992, Riel was posthumously granted a full pardon. Parliament declared that the Métis "were to destroy an economic self-sufficiency because proof for trading with your community."

The house, once home to six members of the Riels extended family, boasts a post-Hivos stove, tools from farm community tools were used for tooling, replica antiques and one actual lithograph sent by Riels devastated sister after his death.

Gable Red House, Gabrielle LaPointe shows off a bone that depicts 1885 border/Jennifer Bain

The Ukrainian cultural hall on Main Street, was first purpose to look at in Manitoba/Jennifer Bain

To follow the story through, stop by La Maude de Saint-Boniface Museum to see the famous pine coffin of Louis Riel and to hear him sweet voice in a song.

Riel's remains were moved to Saint-Boniface Cathedral and interred in a pine coffin for a private hide-side burial in Manitoba. The body was claimed by his brother, brought to the family home and transferred to a protective metal casket with a glass window so mourners could see his face. For two days, thousands filed past the coffin to pay their respects. Then Riel was buried in the cemetery behind the church. Finally, Riel was buried in an elaborate monument called a cairn.

The family filled the original pine coffin with photos and papers and stored it in the closet until donating it to the Société historique de Saint-Boniface for display their museum within St. Boniface Cathedral. The coffin surround a gift for that destroyed the cathedral before being transferred to the care of La Maude de Saint-Boniface Museum.

A statue of an anguished man with a rope that symbolized something when Riel is executed in Winnipeg/Louis Riel Institute & the Universite de Saint-Boniface/Jennifer Bain

The museum is steps from Riel's grave in Saint-Boniface Cemetery and a block from a controversial statue of Riel that stands outside the Manitoba Legislature. The statue, which depicts Riel with one hand in the air the monument is something like famously said just to mother before he death "I know that through the grace of God I am the founder of Manitoba."

Riel House National Historic Site is open daily from the penitentiary bridge to the 613 acres Petite National Historic Site. Co-owned and operated by Parks Canada, the Metis North Heritage Partnership and the Canadian Museum For Human Rights, the Forks is at the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers and has been a meeting place for more than 6,000 years.

More than four million visitors a year come to a hotel, children's theater and festival park stage. They also come to the Forks Market, a 19th century warehouse that is now a collection of shops and eateries. The Aboriginal Peoples Commission of Manitoba Aquatennial Centre. Just past the Esplanade Riel pedestrian bridge they explore the South Point area that has been named Michaelmeer to honor the city's Indigenous heritage and its prominent place alongside these two rivers.

Riel House National Historic Site and Parks Canada Visitor Centre/Jennifer Bain

On a guided tour of the Forks National Historic Site, Ayden Schumacher shows off a beaver pelt that was on a fresco by the Cooks/Jennifer Bain

Parks Canada operates a small portion of the Forks. The 8.9 acre green space dominated by Point Park is for children's playground and splash pad, a stretch of the riverwalk and a Red Sail all charming but also rented and graphen the Richardson's ground aquarium.

On a guided tour of the Forks National Historic Site, Ayden Schumacher shows off a beaver pelt that was on a fresco by the Cooks/Jennifer Bain

On a guided tour of the Forks National Historic Site, Ayden Schumacher shows off a beaver pelt that was on a fresco by the Cooks/Jennifer Bain

Parks Canada operates a small portion of the Forks. The 8.9 acre green space dominated by Point Park is for children's playground and splash pad, a stretch of the riverwalk and a Red Sail all charming but also rented and graphen the Richardson's ground aquarium.

On a guided tour of the Forks National Historic Site, Ayden Schumacher shows off a beaver pelt that was on a fresco by the Cooks/Jennifer Bain

Explore Indigenous Winnipeg

At Steamagg, Indigenous initiatives coordinator, Métis Co-owner Jeanie in front of the visitor next full of local art/Jennifer Bain

- In Canada, "Indigenous" is an umbrella term for distinct groups of First Nations, Métis and Inuit peoples.
- The world's largest collection of contemporary Inuit art is at Winnipeg Art Gallery's Qaumajuq, set Inuit art centre Inuk home to nearly 13,000 pieces and a three-storey stone wall.
- Artist Frederick Lyle Sparrow, of the Peguis First Nation, gives soapstone carving workshops through Sparrow Creative Carving, including one I did at the Agrandissement Centre at the Forks.
- Feast Café Bistro serves modern dishes rooted in traditional Indigenous food, while Promenade Rooms is bring French-Métis flavors to life.
- The Long Plain First Nation owns the Wyndham Garden Winnipeg Airport hotel, which is located on Treaty 1 land. Its Aboriginal Tourism Association of Canada member and Today's Indigenous culture is woven throughout the design, food and artwork.

Winnipeg artist Frederick Lyle Sparrow prepares for a soapstone carving workshop at the Agrandissement Centre/Jennifer Bain

Stories about: Riel House National Historic Site, Forks National Historic Site

More Categories: Canada, Travel

Support National Parks Traveler

Your support for the National Parks Traveler comes at a time when news organizations are finding it hard. A word of thanks seems inadequate, but Traveler's work is vital. Our twenty-two decades we've provided essential information and analysis about America's national parks. Our daily commentaries, recommendations for adventure in the parks, and in-depth interior Secretary Doug Burgum's approach to public lands focused on energy development. We've also reported on the impact of climate change on the parks and how they're affecting visitors' experiences. Your support helps us continue our work. Your support is greatly appreciated.

$2M: 45.0378%

Support Essential Coverage of Essential Places

A copy of National Parks Traveler's financial statements may be obtained by sending a request to National Parks Traveler, 1101 Vermont Ave NW Suite 707 Washington, DC 20005. Financial information about the organization is also available from the following state offices and websites (if any) named below parts and contact person.

Residents of the following states may obtain a copy of our financial and additional information as stated below:

- Florida: A COPY OF THE OFFICIAL REGISTRATION AND FINANCIAL INFORMATION FOR NATIONAL PARKS TRAVELER MAY BE OBTAINED FROM THE DIVISION OF CONSUMER SERVICES BY CALLING TOLL-FREE (800) 435-7352 WITHIN FLORIDA. REGISTRATION DOES NOT IMPLY ENDORSEMENT, APPROVAL, OR RECOMMENDATION BY THE STATE.
- Georgia: A full and fair description of the programs and financial statement summary of National Parks Traveler is available upon request at the office and phone number indicated above.
- Maryland: Documents and information submitted under the Maryland Solicitations Act are also available, for the cost of postage and copies, from the Secretary of State, State House, Annapolis, MD 21401 (410-974-5534).
- North Carolina: Financial information about this organization and a copy of its license are available from the State Solicitation Licensing Branch at 888-830-4989 or 919-807-2214. The license is not an endorsement by the State.
- Pennsylvania: The official registration and financial information of National Parks Traveler may be obtained from the Pennsylvania Department of State by calling toll-free, within Pennsylvania, 1-800-732-0999. Registration does not imply endorsement.
- Virginia: Financial statements are available from the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, 102 Governor Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219.
- Washington: National Parks Traveler is registered with Washington States Charities Program as required by law and additional information is available by calling toll-free 1-800-332-4483 or by writing to the Office of Charities Division, Office of the Secretary of State, State of Washington, Olympia, WA 98501.

Thanks for your support.

National Park Foundation

BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY FOUNDATION

FRIENDS OF ACADIA

SHENANDOAH NATIONAL PARK FUND

GRAND CANYON ASSOCIATION

INN NETWORK

National Parks Traveler is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit media organization.

Invest in the National Parks Traveler's future and help us reach new audiences. Your support helps the Traveler expand its multimedia coverage of these essential places.

Choose amount

$ Custom Amount

Write us a comment

Next ▸

Powered by DonorBox

INN Member

THE INN NETWORK MEMBER

The easiest way to explore RV-friendly National Park campgrounds.

Hands the definitive guide to camping in national campgrounds where RVers can stay.

Our app is packed with filtrop campgrounds, and with over 20 campgrounds in more than 20 national parks.

You'll also find stories about filming in the parks, tips for planning, and recently become an RVer, and useful planning suggestions.

Powered by The Inn Network

FREE for iPhones and Android phones.

GRAND CANYON ASSOCIATION

Grand Canyon Association

grandcanyon.org

100 YOSEMITE CONSERVANCY A Century of Conservation